

Jan 2010

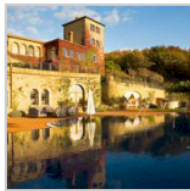

Tuscan Cooking School - Lovely Honeymoon Spot

{Explore}

Add comments

Print Friendly

G+

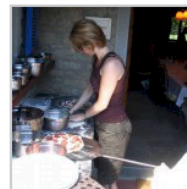

Front view of Torre Del Tartufo overlooking pool

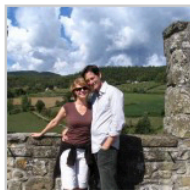

Cooking class at Torre Del Tartufo

Makin' pasta for raviolis at Torre Del Tartufo

Making Pizza at Torre Del Tartufo to go into Pizza Oven

Day Trip to Casentino Castle while at Torre Del Tartufo

If you're looking to begin or end your honeymoon in a romantic, beautiful spot where you and yours can learn a little about Italian cooking while enjoying luxurious surroundings, Torre Del Tartufo is wonderful.

We spent the first week of our honeymoon here and it was great fun. We met new people whom we were able to take day trips together and at the end of the week when we continued on to Florence, we all made plans to meet up again for dinner together. The cooking school is fun and the food you make is amazing. The free flow of wine is quite a plus as well. The landscaping and grounds are secluded, relaxing & totally lovely. Your rooms are amazing - Italian villa style that makes you feel like you've stepped back in time without giving up any amenities.

Here's a clip from their website:

Torre del Tartufo

Torre del Tartufo is set on a hill totally secluded and offers absolute peace and quiet with spectacular views of the surrounding hills. Torre del Tartufo is 80km south of Florence, 12 km from Arezzo, 45 km from Sienna 35 km from Cortona and 10 km from Anghiari which is a picturesque medieval town. The house lies on a large estate (500 acres/200 hectare) consisting of Truffle fields Apple orchids, Hazelnut, Chestnut, Walnut and Oak woods). One river flows through the property with hiking trails making it an ideal location for walks, jogging or picnics. The house has recently been totally restored using original Tuscan materials throughout the whole Tuscan villa.

visit: <http://www.torredeltartufo.com/> to learn more.