Italians know how to enjoy life and fine food.

eat well and are anxious to share their knowledge with their students.

Each year many people combine vacations with food and attend cooking schools around the world. Add any part of Italy into the mix and you have the makings for a fabulous vacation while you learn to make some of the most celebrated food in the world. Cooking schools abound in Tuscany, from those conducted for professional chefs, to small villa kitchens that will arrange classes for their guests. Italians know how to live and

Good Tastes of Tuscany

The Good Tastes of Tuscany Cooking Class offers a full day in their original gallery kitchen in the 13th century Villa Pandolfini, with hands-on instruction with one of their professional Italian chefs. They also offer wine courses, again in their villa, in the Italian Chianti region, just a few kilometers away from Florence. Both classes are available for English speaking students.

Tuscookany

Learn to cook Italian cuisine in the Tuscookany cantinas.

Tuscookany has taught cooking holidays in their Italian cooking school in Tuscany for more than 10 years. Students learn to make classic Tuscan dishes in one of two classic Italian villa cantinas, which have been equipped as professional kitchens with enough working space for everyone. You will learn to make a wide range of antipasto, pasta, pizza and sauces. They offer, in English, three-day courses that teach four different four-course Italian meals. Reservations may be made online.
